

Training: How to Use Salary Surveys

This session will provide participants with an in-depth understanding of salary surveys and their application, including a detailed look at the art of data input and a comprehensive understanding of data output interpretation.

Practical Application:

In addition to learning about salary survey theory and principles, participants have the chance to apply their new knowledge via a number of practical exercises and case studies designed to mirror real life situations.

Interactive Format:

The course will provide an interactive learning session, with each participant having access to a PC, including a practical overview of Hewitt's data input tool, Rapid Rem, followed by a review of Hewitt's various survey outputs including Data Centre.

There will also be ample opportunity provided for group discussion for participants to learn more about remuneration practice across different organisations and industry sectors.

Topics Covered:

The course is modular in nature and covers the following areas:

- The Role of Remuneration in Corporate Strategy
- Salary Survey Theory
- Data Input Methodology
- Data Interpretation & Analysis
- Utilising Hewitt's Online Survey Tools
- Key Supporting Survey Principles

Who Should Attend:

The course is aimed at HR and Remuneration professionals. It is ideal for graduates and analysts new to remuneration. Attendance may also be useful for anyone that requires a comprehensive understanding of survey methodology and data interpretation skills.
